

2000

The Virgin Miss

Myron Hardy Jr
Grand Valley State University

Follow this and additional works at: <http://scholarworks.gvsu.edu/italics>

Recommended Citation

Hardy, Myron Jr (2000) "The Virgin Miss," Italics: Vol. 2000: Iss. 1, Article 36.
Available at: <http://scholarworks.gvsu.edu/italics/vol2000/iss1/36>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks@GVSU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Italics by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks@GVSU. For more information, please contact scholarworks@gvsu.edu.

The Virgin Miss

MYRON HARDY JR.

You are a red rose in full bloom.
A symbol of love
eluding a world of thorns.
How do you maintain so?
Holding your honor close to your heart,
as one does the right hand,
upon hearing the national anthem?
Under such pressure
where if you let your guard down for a second,
you will be poked by at least one thorn
on the bushel.
Consequence, all but pleasant,
for he will be with you two score
and will not know what love looks like,
although, you stand right before his eyes.
How sad would it be for you to lose your virginity in such a way?
I pray for you strength to remain innocent.

Planted in mother earth.
causing the father to smile,
as the son continues to shine on you and your chastity.
Sending water from heaven that will replenish
 your soul,
whenever you grow tempted and weary.
Allowing you to grow evermore strong in spirit,
as you hide your face in the Garden of Eden.
But wait...something would be wrong?
Are men not to pursue you?
How can the righteous give chase not knowing where you stand?
Even the serpents, sharp and conniving
 as they are,
appear dumbfounded.
Truth is, we all need love.
Question is, who are you willing to give yourself to?
If you say my whole name how romantic would that be?
For I will wait forever and a day
or at least until wedding bells ring.