

11-15-2012

Mi Patria

Holly M. VandenToorn
Grand Valley State University

Follow this and additional works at: <http://scholarworks.gvsu.edu/italics>

Recommended Citation

VandenToorn, Holly M. (2001) "Mi Patria," Italics: Vol. 2001: Iss. 1, Article 19.
Available at: <http://scholarworks.gvsu.edu/italics/vol2001/iss1/19>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks@GVSU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Italics by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks@GVSU. For more information, please contact scholarworks@gvsu.edu.

Mi Patria

HOLLY M. VANDENTOORN

Texas is the place I miss the most—
 Big state with big attitude.
 Cowboy boots and ten-gallon hats,
 Buckles as big as you ever saw,
 Big, gold and silver shiny rodeo scenes.
 And the old rusted pickups—I'm not sure
 If I'm talking about the trucks or the bars.

Walk the dirt dusty roads, with a dry, sweet smell that'll
 Soak up in your olfactory receptors and Is as thick as the white fluff stuff, cotton growing there.
 Mistuhs and missus glow red here,
 The mistuhs with the leather skin, cracked, looking like a beef jerky, carne secadora so good that You could taste the salt not yet on your tongue.

But I digress.
 Texas is the place that I miss most.
 A wand of wind waving over the bluebonnets
 Green stalks corroded with cobalt hues.
 A green cacti stands staunch as a colonel in the Mexican War with his red bandera. And then you see more in the sandy yard and suddenly becomes cactus.

Days hot enough to make el diablo sigh, and no rain yet. Emerald grass abounds not, but more like topaz, that is yellow-brown stalk-sticks of thirsty crunching under your feet until you squish on a chameleon. A slender tongue darts out and in.
 The pecan tree and the fig tree, they're the only green things because they are what matters in all this.

After the melting sun descends into night thick as honey and as amber too until a smear of strawberry jam appears on the toasty sky. A little apricot, and of course you can't forget the marmelaide, we like 'em all.
And the sun drips away like a scoop of blood-orange sherbet you set out at noon. You get left with the likes of an unpatriotic flag—all the stars and none of the stripes. Negro as crow.

For all of its great command of nature,
Its glorious color and texture, golden and green;
Gravel and dirt; smell the dirt too and taste the fruit thereof: the best pecans you ever did taste.
Between the t'bacc smell and mammaw's wash,
You almost taste the rain, you see the waves of cobalt
Wash over the crystal blue sky, mi patria, Texas.