A NEWSLETTER FOR THE GRAND VALLEY
STATE UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY

Published by News & Information Services

Fall Arts Celebration 2011 will conclude with 'Gloria'

"Gloria: Music of the Holiday Season from Grand Valley" will be performed Monday, December 5, 8 p.m. at Fountain Street Church in Grand Rapids.

This holiday gift to the community is the final Fall Arts Celebration 2011 event. It is free and open to the public.

The University Arts Chorale and soloists will join Music Department faculty members and students for a special performance of Baroque holiday music masterpieces, including Antonio Vivaldi's "Gloria" and Arcangelo Corelli's "Christmas Concerto." Fountain Street Church was selected for its superb acoustics and central location, officials said.

"This is a rare opportunity to hear this iconic and upbeat music with professional performers in the Fountain Street Church venue," said Danny Phipps, chair of music. "That the public is invited to attend, without cost, is a true gift to the community."

The great bulk of Vivaldi's music lay virtually unknown until after the end of World War I. In 1926, through a chance discovery of nearly 400 unknown manuscripts found among crates of old documents up for sale, the music of this great Italian Master was unleashed upon the modern world.

The University Arts Chorale and music faculty members and students will perform 'Gloria' on December 5 at Fountain Street Church.

"Gloria" was among those manuscripts that had lain in near obscurity for two centuries after the composer's death. Written in about 1715 for the choir of a girls' orphanage in Venice, where Vivaldi spent most of his career composing sacred works, "Gloria" has come to symbolize the very best of all of the music of the holiday season. This monumental piece, with the sunny nature of its distinctive melodies coupled with the brilliant harmony and the rhythms, is characteristic of all of Vivaldi's music.

Corelli was a seminal figure of Baroque music a generation earlier and is recognized as setting the foundations of the genre later adapted by Vivaldi, Handel and Bach. Born to a wealthy family, Corelli enjoyed a successful career during the time the music publishing industry in Italy was flourishing. His fame and wealth allowed nearly all of his works to be printed and circulated internationally during his lifetime (1653-1713), though ironically his most famous "Christmas Concerto," or "Fatto per la notte di Natale," first appeared in print a year after his death.

Public meeting on wind energy will include Netherlands video chat

Grand Valley, in partnership with Michigan Sea Grant and the Michigan Energy Office, is hosting a public meeting on the benefits and challenges of offshore wind energy development, with a special focus on tourism. The early December meeting includes a video chat from people in the Netherlands who live and work near an offshore wind farm.

Representatives from the West Michigan tourism and government sectors, along with community members, can ask questions about how the Egmond aan Zee offshore wind farm has affected tourism in coastal communities in the Netherlands. Dutch participants include a tourism program manager and a sustainability program manager. Paulus Heule, Honorary Dutch Consul for West Michigan, will provide opening remarks about the social and economic ties between West Michigan and the Netherlands and continued opportunities for cultural and scientific exchanges.

"Holland (Mich.) to Holland (Netherlands)" is scheduled for Monday, December 5, from 10 a.m.-noon at the Meijer Campus in Holland.

Offshore wind energy projects generate low-pollution electricity in many countries in Europe, including the Netherlands, but there are none presently in North America. "People here have no experience with the technology and are rightfully concerned about potential effects on tourism and coastal communities," said Erik Nordman, principal investigator for West Michigan Wind Assessment. "By connecting people in Michigan with those in the Netherlands, we hope to share knowledge and experiences about offshore wind energy."

The event is free and open to the public but space is limited. RSVP at wind@gvsu.edu. For more information contact Nordman at x18705.

PIC will celebrate Kingston partnership

The Padnos International Center will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the Grand Valley-Kingston University partnership in 2012.

Mark Schaub, executive director of PIC, said several events are planned to highlight this successful international partnership and one involves help from the campus community.

Grand Valley's Art Gallery will showcase an exhibit of photos and reflections from students, faculty and staff members who have been involved in partnership programs. Schaub said the last decade of the Kingston partnership is well represented, but PIC staff members are seeking photos and documents from 1987-1997.

Photos and other items can be sent to Rebecca Hambleton, director of Study Abroad and International Partnerships, 130 Lake Ontario Hall. Items will be returned. The deadline for submission is early December.

Name change for Community Outreach Office

After seven years of operating under the title of Community Outreach Office in the College of Education, the name will change to Center for Educational Partnerships.

Claudia Sowa Wojciakowski, director of the center, said the name change is due in part to the ever-growing work and partnerships with area schools, organizations and businesses.

"We came to realize that a majority of our work was not about just going out into the communities the COE serves and working, but with actually developing partnerships that provide greater value to all of those involved," she said. "We've gone from being an office that provides resources to being a strong connector in helping schools and other groups actually achieve their goals and success by linking them with key partners."

Grand Valley signs international declaration on Open Access

Grand Valley is among 33 institutions, associations and foundations in the U.S., Canada and Mexico that have signed the Berlin Declaration on Open Access to Knowledge in the Sciences and Humanities. The signing was in conjunction with the ninth Berlin Conference, which was held November 9-10 at the Howard Hughes Medical Institute in Bethesda, Maryland.

To date, nearly 300 institutions from around the world have signed the declaration, which promotes the Internet as a medium for disseminating global knowledge, making it more accessible to the broad public. For more information, visit www.berlin9.org.

University Libraries has already begun building an infrastructure to support the principles of the Berlin Declaration. For example, the libraries host ScholarWorks@GVSU, an open-access digital repository that collects scholarly, educational, and creative works by Grand Valley faculty, staff and students, and preserves these works, with a static URL, on a long-term basis. In the past year, more than 117,700 items were downloaded from the Grand Valley repository by researchers.

"One of the ways Grand Valley gives back to the community is by ensuring that the research and creative outputs of its faculty and staff are made available to the widest possible audience," said Lee Van Orsdel, dean of university libraries.
