to Bookstore personnel before the ring can be ordered. The rings are available in both white and yellow gold with a choice of blue or black stones. They may be ordered anytime starting today and will arrive in four weeks.

GVSC Welcomes 21 New Faculty Members

In its April 15th meeting, the Board of Control approved appointments of twenty-one new faculty members. Two of them will be part-time members; the other nineteen will teach full time.

The department receiving the largest number of new members is the English department with an addition of four. Joseph F. Carroll, teacher of French at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, will be assistant professor of English and French. Mrs. Roberta Chamberlain of Grand Haven will be assistant professor of English. Dr. Gilbert R. Davis, who will be associate professor of English at G.V.S.C., is presently a teacher of English at State University College in Geneseo, N.Y. A new assistant professor of English is E. William Oldenburg, who is now a teaching fellow at the University of Michigan. Besides these four, Dr. Stanley Wiersma who teaches English at Calvin, will be visiting professor of English for the summer quarter.

The mathematics department is receiving two new members. One is Dr. Holmes Boynton, who comes from Northern Michigan University where he is professor of mathematics. He is to be professor of mathematics at G.V.S.C. The second member, who is to be assistant professor of mathematics is Mr. Ralph A. Wiltse, presently a graduate assistant in mathematics at Wayne State University.

Two new members are also coming to the philosophy department. Mr. John Beversluis, who is now a teaching associate and lecturer in philosophy at Indiana University, will be assistant professor of philosophy. Dr. Dewey J. Hoitenga Jr., chairman of the department of philosophy at Juniata College in Huntingdon, Pa., will be associate professor of philosophy.

'LAKERS' Wins

G.V.S.C. has finally been nicknamed! After many previous suggestions for names, the selection was narrowed to six: Archers, Ottawas, Blue Jays, Royagers, Bruisers, and Warriors. However, in the deciding vote Grand Valley students chose the nickname Lakers.

The name was submitted by a sophomore co-ed, Annie Kate McDonald. For this entry Annie received a prize of twenty-five dollars which was awarded by the United Collegiate Organization of Grand Valley State College.

The student government will soon begin work on an emblem.

Dorms and Expeditions Pass Board

On Thursday, April 15, the G.V.S.C. Board of Control met to approve, for one thing, the location of the dormitory which will be the first to be owned by the college. It is to be built approximately half way between the present complex and highway M-45. The dormitory will accommodate 218 students and will cost a maximum of one million dollars. Completion is expected in the fall of 1966.

Another matter that was approved is the location of the next academic complex which is to be near the new dormitory. This project is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1967.

A new student center will be built at this new complex and will include eating facilities for the dormitory residents as well as for the commuting students attending the second academic complex. This building was decided upon rather than constructing an addition to the Seidman House.

At this meeting the Board of Control also received and approved funds for another expedition to Antarctica which is to be directed by President Zumberge. The grant of $56,000 for the expedition, which will be made in the winter of 1965-66, came from the National Science Foundation.

Ski Club Takes To The Water

On Friday, April 30 at 4:30 p.m. approximately thirty Ski Club members will drive to Pine River near Cadillac for a canoe trip. They will go down the river on Saturday and will pull out Sunday noon, having ended their trip. The entire length of the trip will be about fifty-eight miles.

The word is that three of the members most expert in canoeing have already gone down the river, and even they dumped over.

The president of the Ski Club, Dave Hufford, says that the canoe trip will be an annual event provided that enough people show the desire and the hardiness for such a trip.

Editorial:

HONESTLY!

It certainly is exciting to discover that honesty is by no means always the best policy. Once we have determined this new principle, the imagination is the limit to the clever things we can do. But how will we get around this nagging notion that honesty is the best policy -- a tidy phrase we've heard from the cradle to the Republic? Simple. The evidence to the contrary is extravagantly abundant all around. Cheating is not only relatively easy to get by with, but in some cases actually claims to be the best policy.

I shall limit myself immediately from a discussion of blatant robbing-a-bank type of dishonesty although there are, apparently even at Grand Valley, some overt crimes which, though unexposed for one reason or another, are going on and being detected. Perhaps we should even rule out of the discussion the frequent dishonesty in the classroom such as cheating on an exam. These standard dishonesty crimes still tend to be frowned on by the society, are punished when caught, and serve to prove the old adage.

But the adage apparently has somewhere been discredited and we are in search of such evidence. One huge fraud which is being put over on the whole of American society but especially on American college students is the "new morality." A topic too broad to allow full exploration here, the new morality is certainly one of the biggest confidence jobs of the century since it oddly enough pretends to be so honest. We have rid ourselves of cover-up taboos, antiquated euphemisms, and what-not. But unfortunately we are woefully deceiving ourselves when we accept the barnyard trash which parades in books and magazines and talk as the honest, open, new morality. All too much of it is plain immorality masquerading under a persuasive new name. Don't be hoodwinked into thinking that in moral questions the policy is no longer honestly before God and man, but rather the best policy to follow is expediency, pleasure of the moment and popularity.

But still, this form of dishonesty is held in check by some. What are those things which are generally held to be upright and okay and are really as unequivocally false as any publishable crimes of dishonesty? Everyone recognizes the false compliment -- at least the person paying such a tribute. Equally revolting is the false friendship which shows through a statement like, "she is really a nice person, but..." Or where are our scruples against the false promise: "I'd love to work on the Keystone--sometime." All these forms serve one purpose which is the elevation of the speaker. These people desire to have your friendship and beat it too. The false remarks not only attempt to deceive the hearer but deceive the speaker as well.

Some cheating is far more subtle than any I have thus far mentioned -- and is more damaging to the cheater, too. A classic example is one I learned in the first quarter of the freshman foundation program (that year is good for more than forty-five credits). A class was writhing under the pressure of an energetic lecture which suddenly ended five minutes early. The class cheered. And the professor remarked, "Funny, if you pay good money for something at a store, you demand your full money's worth. Here you pay hundreds for an education and cheer when you are cheated out of five minutes which is rightfully yours."

Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand. (Shakespeare, Hamlet, Act II, Sc. 2)
