

Ought: The Journal of Autistic Culture

Volume 2
Issue 1 Autism and Neurodiversity

Article 3

November 2020

Babble About Autism Talks Too Much

Adam J. Wolfond

The A Collective, esteeklar22@gmail.com

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial 4.0 International License

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.gvsu.edu/ought>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Wolfond, Adam J. (2020) "Babble About Autism Talks Too Much," Ought: The Journal of Autistic Culture: Vol. 2: Iss. 1, Article 3.

DOI: 10.9707/2833-1508.1042

Available at: <https://scholarworks.gvsu.edu/ought/vol2/iss1/3>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks@GVSU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Ought: The Journal of Autistic Culture by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks@GVSU. For more information, please contact scholarworks@gvsu.edu.

Babble About Autism Talks Too Much

I think that the walk is always a way to create many ways of thinking and I always am excited to take language on a walking to answer random ways questioning all

raving wise thinking academics that are passing as the easy experts and pass pace of thought about autism. Easy ways of questioning are open to want salty ways packing thankless people who are always wanting the ways to be easy explained. I think that the alternative is to think about questioning assumptions about the way thinking is assembled and the way the apathy of talkers always ignores the frowning within pale wanting autistic vault of feeling.

The way of talked autism is very hard to face and the way of the tacky goals of academics. I think that the walk must always map the way of making space doings

and old ways

—Adam Wolfond

Adam Wolfond is a non-speaking writer who is the youngest poet published by poets.org. He is a public text-to-speech presenter, collaborator on academic projects, and an artist who has previously exhibited in Toronto. He has published two books of poetry with Unrestricted Interest.