CALL FOR PAPERS, FALL, 1996

The Review's advisory board and editorial staff have agreed that, because of the enthusiastic response to this year's topics, we continue in the same vein. The special topic for fall, 1996 will be "Grand Valley's Mission: Past, Present, Future."

The Review can be an instrument for dialogue on a currently provocative matter. For instance, as we move toward a uniform faculty evaluation process, how will we be defining and judging excellence in teaching? What will constitute adequate or impressive scholarship? What kinds of service to the unit, the University, and the community will be deemed appropriate? As we take part in assessment, we may consider not only whether but how the University should continue to grow. How can we help to foster collegiality when computers keep us in our offices and non-teaching requirements take us off campus? How can we make and keep connections between the units and members of the University community? What are your other concerns?

Deadline is September 1, 1996. Send submissions in hard copy accompanied by a diskette, with your name and software, to Roberta Simone, 166 Lake Huron Hall, or to any member of the staff or advisory board.
