Grand Valley Review

Volume XI Fall 1994

This past summer many people commented on the wildflowers at Lot G. These wildflowers were seeded along with sheep fescue when the new expansion to Lot G was built last year. This fall and next spring the Grounds Department will be mowing, scarifying and reseeding certain areas so that the wildflowers will germinate and grow next summer. Some of the wildflowers are perennials, but the most colorful ones are annuals.

The wildflower mixture is made up of the following: blue flax (16%); white and purple dame's rocket, yellow calendula, blue dwarf cornflower, and scarlet flax, (about 10% each); cornflower, California poppy, Siberian wallflower, lance-leaved coreopsis, Sweet William pinks, tree mallow, and sweet alyssum (from 7% to roughly 2% each); spurred snapdragon, corn poppy, Chinese forget-me-not, cosmos, Chinese houses, catchfly, and black-eyed Susan (1% each); and traces of annual gaillardia, purple coneflower, foxglove, four-o'clock, and Texas bluebonnet.
