CALL FOR PROPOSALS TO PRESENT A BRIGHT IDEA

for

TeacherNet: Connections Across Time and Space

Spring Conference on the English Language Arts
Saturday, April 9, 1994, 9:00-4:00 p.m.

MSU Union Building, East Lansing, MI

The autonomous teacher, isolated in the classroom behind closed doors, is becoming an anachronism. In the 1990's, more than ever before, teachers are expressing a need for professional community. The links we establish with other teachers, with our community, and with our students strengthen our teaching and our profession.

The 1994 Spring Conference is looking for proposals that focus on Bright Ideas for helping educators make these connections. Topics that lend themselves to this theme include the following:

- Connections between school and community
- Networking for equity and democracy in classrooms
- Networking to influence political decision-making
- Teachers networking with teachers
- Forming communities through writing groups
- Networking in the 90's: electronic connections
- Connecting teachers and students
- Connecting theory with practice
- Linking the present with the past
- Language Arts as the critical link to learning across the disciplines
- Networking through classroom research

Presentations will be 50 minutes and may involve various modes; Lecture/discussion, demonstration, or workshop participation.

Presentors are responsible for providing their own audio-visual equipment, with the exception of screens.

Return a brief description (one page) of your proposal by January 15, 1994, to Marilyn Wilson, Department of English, 201 Morrill Hall, Michigan State University, East Lansing, MI 48824.
