No You Don't
by Daniel J. Brege

The world saw it,
but didn't know it.
It jumped out in front of them.
It waved its arms
It changed colors
four times.
The fire works
above it,
and below it,
MAGNIFIED it.
Everything
pointed at it.
The world heard it,
but didn't know it.
It rumbled like a cap gun
in World War II.
It purred like
a milky lion.
It's screeching,
and moaning,
and scraping,
some day
to a halt.
Sometimes, it's like freshly varnished wood,
But then again
Sometimes it's like sand in a baloney sandwich.
It didn't care if it was like an open sardine can, or home baked bread.
The world doesn't care if it cares.
it be,
it am,
it is
But you don't know it.
