Laundry

I am a black sweater, clinging to freckle,
scar, skin.
I am a slim, silky tie, stretching every limb, every fingertip toward the rough stubble of your neck.
I am your tweed slacks, whispering silent kisses over thighs, tendons, calves.
A fleshy pair of cashmere socks that breathes and brushes and nuzzles your sacred ankles.
Soft and warm, I am yours always,
brown loafers
surrounding every move with content, comfortable embrace.

Gretchen Rumohr-Voskuil lives in Grand Rapids, Michigan with her husband and four young children. She teaches literature, writing and language arts methods at Aquinas College (ghr001@aquinas.edu). She also does the laundry.
