Call for Spotlights

Do you know a student, educator, reviewer, or community member who has a passion for literacy? Who advocates for justice? Who is innovating the ways we care for each other and learn together? Whose voice should be heard by a wider audience? Whose work embodies the spirit of our calls for submissions? We would love to feature them in forthcoming issues of the Language Arts Journal of Michigan. We want to highlight Michigan's rich, diverse literacy community. We are especially interested in learning from leaders of color, persons with disabilities, LGBTQIA+ individuals, and leaders from other groups who have been historically marginalized. We define leadership broadly, and believe that all students, educators, reviewers, and community members can be leaders.

Please nominate someone by filling out our online form. In the form, please state why you believe this person should be featured in a forthcoming issue of the Language Arts Journal of Michigan. We will use these nominations to conduct interviews for our spotlights.
