

May 1975

Did You Know...

Norma K. Conklin

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarworks.gvsu.edu/mrj>

Recommended Citation

Conklin, Norma K. (1975) "Did You Know...," Michigan Reading Journal: Vol. 9: Iss. 2, Article 8.
Available at: <https://scholarworks.gvsu.edu/mrj/vol9/iss2/8>

This work is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks@GVSU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Michigan Reading Journal by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks@GVSU. For more information, please contact scholarworks@gvsu.edu.

DID YOU KNOW

over one hundred and fifty years ago students were reading by "Reader"; i.e., they had to achieve mastery at one level before proceeding to the next that at one time the Michigan Department of Education issued a course of study for all rural teachers, outlining the requirements to be taught that even as late as the 1930's all seventh and eighth grade students went to the County Seat each spring to take the state examinations years ago rural teachers were asking "upper grade" Johnny to help "lower grade" Suzie with her work a student who was exceptionally good in one subject could "listen in" and/or go to a class that was above his grade level if a student were below grade level, he could get several re-runs on a skill as it was being taught at the lower level gold stars were given for excellent work rural parents who were usually too busy to visit school got a home visit from the teacher boys and girls learned independent study habits early because the classes were short and many that every morning for ten or fifteen minutes the teacher read aloud a chapter or two from an interesting book — to be continued each morning until the entire book was completely read to the children there was a separate penmanship class all "good" papers were written in pen and ink poetry was memorized

children did factoring in math exhibits of academic work were saved for the county fair

And that's the way it was in the one-room rural schools.

by Norma K. Conklin

(Norma K. Conklin is Assistant Professor Emeritus, Ferris State College.)