About the Cover

The image on the cover of this issue is an adapted version of a flier created to advertise the 1973 National Poetry Festival held at Grand Valley State Colleges. The 1973 festival was the second ever held, and poets traveled from around the nation to attend the event. The invited poets that year included Diane di Prima, Robert Duncan, Allen Ginsberg, David Meltzer, and Kenneth Rexroth. The festival lasted for ten days and the nightly readings drew in audiences of 400 people.

This image is preserved in the Grand Valley Special Collections and University

Archives, a division of University Libraries. The University Archives includes items that paint a picture of Grand Valley's history through photographs, posters, and student media.

University Archives and the histories they document are featured on page 14 of this issue.
