1995

The Writing Teacher

Rhonda Hawthorne-Larkin

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.gvsu.edu/lajm

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.9707/2168-149X.1535

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by ScholarWorks@GVSU. It has been accepted for inclusion in Language Arts Journal of Michigan by an authorized editor of ScholarWorks@GVSU. For more information, please contact scholarworks@gvsu.edu.
The Writing Teacher  (for Joyce Wiencek)

Rhonda Hawthorne-Larkin

She proclaimed we were writers
the very first day.
She said, "Writers are people who have something to say."

She said we'd write fables and poetry and such;
We couldn't help thinking
she was expecting too much.

We brainstormed, we drafted;
The writing process started.
No one felt very comfortable;
Our enthusiasm was half-hearted.

She encouraged and conferenced and guided us through the writing that few of us thought we could do.

Our class celebration,
the very last day.
Proved the teacher was right
By what we all had to say.

As each of us read
Some of our work to the class,
We were at times brought to tears;
Other times we would laugh.

Our writing teacher listened and looked on with pride,
As each revealed the talent
we'd long kept inside.